More Bay St. Louis Shoppers, Straight to Splash

Prepared for Splash Boutique · Bay St. Louis, MS

Splash has a good-looking Shopify store, and it comes up first when someone searches "Splash Boutique Bay St. Louis." The problem is shoppers who don't know your name yet. When I searched "women's boutique Bay St. Louis" and "boutiques in Bay St. Louis," Google's map showed The Boutique by TWC, le Diva's Closet and bijoubel, and Splash only appeared through its Facebook page. Here are a few free changes that would help Google send those shoppers to you.

FIX

1. No Google reviews yet

Your Google listing (833 US-90, open 11 to 6) says "Be the first to review." Reviews are one of the biggest reasons Google picks which shops to show on the map, and shoppers trust them.

Put a review link on a small card at the register and in order-confirmation emails. Even 10 to 15 reviews makes a real difference.

FIX

2. Your address, phone and hours aren't on the website

The words "Bay St. Louis" don't appear anywhere on the home page, and /pages/contact goes to a "Page Not Found" screen. Google matches a website to a local shop by finding the same name, address and phone on both.

Add a Visit Us section in the footer (833 US-90 Ste A, (228) 297-7355, hours) and a simple contact page.

FIX

3. Page title doesn't say what or where you are

The browser tab and Google headline read "Splash Boutique – Wear Splash Boutique." It doesn't say women's clothing or Bay St. Louis, which are the words new shoppers type.

Change it to something like "Splash Boutique | Women's Clothing & Accessories in Bay St. Louis, MS." It's a two-minute change in Shopify's settings.

FIX

4. Photos have no descriptions

57 of the 59 images on the home page have no alt text, and the home page has no main heading. Google can't read photos, so it relies on these descriptions to understand what you sell, and screen readers need them too.

Add short descriptions like "white studded ribbed tank top" to product photos and a main heading on the home page.

FIX

5. An old listing at your address

MapQuest still shows a business called Violet Bambina at 833 US-90, Ste A. Old listings like this can confuse Google about who is at your address.

Claim or correct the old listing so only Splash shows there.

GOOD

6. Strong shop and social presence

Your Shopify store has a clean look, a full catalog with prices and a newsletter signup, and your Facebook and Instagram already rank for Bay St. Louis searches. These fixes just help Google connect it all.

Most of this can be done in a week without changing your store's look.
